

Anderton (who allegedly fleeced neighbors at the upscale Belgravia, left, where he lived with Kirsch) had no criminal record before his arrest. But Kirsch has several minor theft charges on her record, including a 2006 citation for stealing from a cosmetics store.

including for the rental of a UPS mailbox—Det. Sweeney staked out a UPS center and nabbed the couple picking up packages that reportedly included lingerie from England. Says Greenblatt: “Taking credit information from someone who lives across the hall—how anyone thinks they can get away with that kind of stupidity is beyond me.”

Police also found cash, receipts and an industrial-quality ID-making machine in their condo. Both Kirsch and Anderton were freed on bail and released in the custody of their parents; a hearing is set for Feb. 12. “It surprises me that someone so smart could be so dumb,” says one of Anderton’s childhood friends. “I hope all those vacations were worth it.”
